

2017 Summer Developmental Camps

Brashear Basketball Summer Developmental Camps are a fun, positive, high-energy experience that develops basic basketball fundamentals for both boys and girls. Our goal is that each child improves during the camp and leaves with a knowledge of not only basic basketball skills, but the desire and an understanding of how to continue to improve on their own.

The camps focus on the basic basketball fundamentals: footwork/agility, ball-handling, dribbling, passing/catching and shooting. Every day each young player will be introduced to new individual and group drills encompassing the five target areas. The drills will be progressively taught and reviewed each day, and the skills will be incorporated into a variety of games and competitions. The developmental camps will focus on positive improvement each day for each child in a fun, energetic and competitive environment.

All camps are taught and coordinated by Robert Brashear, a Lubbock native who played collegiately at the Air Force Academy and Texas Tech, he then coached nine years at Texas Tech. While coaching at Tech he was a part of three Southwest Conference Championships, tutored two conference players of the year, 13 All-Conference players (SWC & Big 12), 5 NBA players (one lottery pick) and numerous others who played professionally. Additionally four other players have gone on to currently coach in the NBA. Many other players and managers have gone on to coach at the high school and college level. Robert served as the director for the Texas Tech Summer Basketball Camps for nine years. He is currently the Athletic Director and Boys Basketball Coach at All Saints High School in Lubbock. Brashear Basketball offers the premier skill development, shooting instruction and offensive efficiency training clinics and camps for girls and boys in the West Texas area.

The staff at Brashear Basketball is comprised of several current and former high school and college players and coaches that share a commitment to young people and understand the philosophy that the development of strong fundamental skills at an early age equates to future success.
